Vedic Chanting UNESCO Intangible Cultural Heritage

For millennia, the spiritual and cultural fabric of our nation has been sustained by oral transmission of the Vedas. The power of the Vedas lies in their precise vibrations, passed down uninterrupted from Guru to Shishya. To preserve this tradition, young students undergo an arduous 10 to 12-year journey, studying up to 12 hours a day under the guidance of dedicated Gurus.

The Silent Crisis Facing Vedic Scholars

Completing the studies is only the first step. Unlike other professions, a Vedic scholar must practice daily recitation without break to retain the vast scriptures in memory.

The Gap in Support: Previously, institutions like the Tirumala Tirupathi Devasthanam (TTD) supported scholars with monthly honorariums of ₹17,000 to recite at various temples. However, with these schemes temporarily withheld, newly graduated scholars are left without financial security.

The Risk of Lost Tradition: Without basic financial stability, these highly trained young scholars are increasingly forced to abandon their lineage and seek lesser, professions simply to sustain their families. Once a chanter leaves the tradition, a link in an unbroken chain of thousands of years is lost forever.

Sri V.P.T.V. Trust

Formed as a registered Public Charitable Trust in Kanchipuram, our primary mission is to identify young talent from economically humble backgrounds, provide them with traditional Vedic education, and support them in performing Kainkaryam (sacred service) to Lord Varadarāja Swamy, as prescribed by the great saint and reformer, Sri Rāmānujācārya.

Current Footprint: We currently support seven students under rigorous daily training. The Trust provides a stipend of ₹2,000 per month to help support their families, alongside taking care of the Gurus who teach them.

The Immediate Objective: Our focus is to provide a sustainable, dignified livelihood for fully trained Veda chanters associated with the Kanchi Varadaraja Temple and nearby shrines. This ensures they can dedicate their lives to the daily preservation and recitation of the Vedas at the temple without financial anxiety.

An Urgent Appeal to Custodians of Dharma

To support a new group of chanters and students associated with the sacred Kanchi Varadaraja Temple, the Trust requires a collective funding of ₹2,00,000 (2 Lakh) per month.
